CLOUD GIANTS: UIPATH

Christopher Gannatti — Global Head of Research 08/17/2021

On Cloud Giants, a podcast brought to you by Bessemer Venture Partners (BVP), Byron Deeter of BVP interviews entrepreneurs, founders and great leaders who have built world-changing cloud companies.

In this episode, Byron discusses key stories behind the founding of UiPath with its co-founder and CEO, Daniel Dines. UiPath is a leader in the field of robotic process automation (RPA). RPA has the potential to transform how companies in many industries attack many of the repetitive, day-to-day tasks, allowing people who may not be proficient in software coding to help with overall automation efforts.

- Daniel has an incredible story. He grew up in Romania, and he describes the 20 years prior to 1990 as effectively "stuck in time." After 1990, communism fell, and there was massive entrepreneurship and transition occurring all around. Daniel worked at Microsoft from 2000 to 2005. In his view, he saw a lack of forward progress at the company in those years, and he was not excited to continue working there with such a low level of innovation. He ultimately left Microsoft and went back to Romania to begin the series of steps that led to the founding of UiPath.
- Daniel mentions that one of the best things about working on a tech company in Romania was the ability to tap into incredible engineering talent at a very low cost. UiPath certainly did not start in a straight line, focusing on RPA the entire time. There were numerous iterations that occurred before even the name UiPath was used. Consumer products and outsourcing were two of the initial focal points that did not pan out in the end. Daniel cites these fits and starts as essential for his training as a CEO. They helped him learn how to be more effective in making decisions, as well as appreciate the factor of timing within the given lifecycle of a business.
- One of the most interesting parts of the podcast regards how Daniel approached sales. There was a phase where the plan was to use engineers who would, over the Internet, directly show users how to do different things and extract value from the product. Then, there was a period of time where it was more important to start building a direct sales team, and this occurred later in UiPath's journey, indicating that direct sales wasn't the "right move" initially. Daniel also emphasizes the value in partnerships and ensuring that the different partners are able to fully utilize and see the direct value in the software. It's notable that there was no singular approach, and that Daniel saw the value in evolving the sales process in a way that fit what was needed in UiPath's evolution at each particular time.

The WisdomTree Cloud Computing Fund (WCLD), through a collaboration with Nasdaq, leverages the expertise of Bessemer Venture Partners (BVP), a leading venture capital investor in cloud-based businesses with more than a decade of investment success in the cloud computing industry. BVP is not affiliated with WisdomTree Asset Management. There are risks associated with investing, including possible loss of principal. The Fund invests in cloud computing companies, which are heavily dependent on the Internet and utilizing a distributed network of servers over the Internet. Cloud computing companies may have limited product lines, markets, financial resources or personnel and are subject to the risks of changes in business cycles, world economic growth, technological progress and government regulation. These companies typically face intense competition and potentially rapid product obsolescence. Additionally, many cloud computing companies store sensitive consumer information and could be the target of cybersecurity attacks and other types of theft, which could have a negative impact on these companies and the Fund. Securities of cloud computing companies tend to be more volatile than securities of companies that rely less heavily on technology and, specifically, on the Internet. Cloud computing companies can typically engage in significant amounts of spending on research and development, and rapid changes to the field could have a material adverse effect on a company's operating results. The composition of the Index is heavily dependent on quantitative and qualitative information and data from one or more third parties, and the Index may not perform as intended.
