Market Outlook: Investment ideas in focus

Outlook theme	Rationale	Main investment tools
Japan: Reform and reflation with the yen hedged	+ Japan remains one of our preferred developed-market exposures. TOPIX reached record highs and earnings for the fiscal year ending March 2026 (FY3/26) earnings rose 27% in aggregate. + Support for Japanese equities remains broad-based, underpinned by AI-linked earnings growth, a tentative return to positive real wage growth, and a large pool of household savings that could gradually rotate into equities. + Governance reform has continued to progress. The Financial Services Authority's (FSA) revised Corporate Governance Code keeps the focus on more productive use of cash, supporting a multi-year improvement in corporate efficiency and shareholder returns, rather than a one-off uplift. + The near-term challenge is a weaker yen and softer Japanese Government Bonds. The WisdomTree Japan Equity ETF (DXJ) is designed with this in mind. Its currency hedge aims to reduce the impact of yen weakness for overseas investors while its tilt to dividend-paying exporters seeks exposure to companies that may benefit from a competitive currency and rising payouts. Emerging markets: The case for stripping out the State	+ Emerging markets (EM) offer an attractive combination of structural growth, relatively cheap currencies, reasonable valuations and improving earnings-revision momentum. + State ownership is often where governance concerns are most acute, with value at times accruing to the state rather than to minority investors. Excluding state-owned enterprises (SOE) tilts the portfolio toward more accountable, commercially driven companies, reducing exposure to state-directed regulatory risk. + The artificial intelligence (AI) and semiconductor investment cycle has supported the private sector earnings across Asia. The country composition of EM is being redrawn in real time, and the forward earnings revision cycle for non-SOE companies continues to run ahead of the SOE cohort. + The WisdomTree Emerging Markets ex-State-Owned Enterprises UCITS ETF systematically excludes companies where a government holds more than 20% ownership, thereby providing exposure to private sector companies, while shedding the drag of state-directed capital. Outlook theme	Rationale	Main investment tools
AI Infrastructure: Hyperscaler spending will keep rising as AI inference delivers measurable returns	+ The long-running question of whether AI spending can generate adequate returns is being answered. Companies such as Anthropic are demonstrating that the economics can work, easing market concerns and reigniting investor interest in the theme. + Hyperscaler capital expenditure is already enormous and expected to rise further. The scale of commitment from Alphabet, Meta and Amazon Web Services signals that this is a structural, multi-year build-out rather than a cyclical surge. + Chip manufacturing has become the critical bottleneck. Demand for advanced fabrication capacity from TSMC and others is outpacing supply, and building new capacity takes years, making these constraints a defining feature of the AI infrastructure landscape for the foreseeable future.	WisdomTree Artificial Intelligence UCITS ETF
Quantum Computing: Companies will need to start acting on quantum readiness	+ Quantum computing has become a matter of national priority. The US government has moved from funding research to taking equity stakes in the businesses developing this technology, signalling a fundamental shift in how seriously this is being taken at the highest levels of policy. + The investment case has broadened well beyond hardware. Post-quantum cryptography, software and networking are all part of the opportunity, with near-term government procurement deadlines creating a concrete and time-sensitive catalyst. + The leading quantum companies are no longer talking about distant possibilities. IBM, IonQ, Quantinuum and PsiQuantum are publishing specific milestones with specific dates, bringing the commercialisation of quantum computing into a realistic near-term horizon. Outlook theme	Rationale	Main investment tools
Broad commodities: The baton never drops, but who carries it keeps changing	+ Electrification, AI infrastructure and rising defence budgets are creating structural demand for metals just as supply deficits are deepening across many of them. + El Niño's return is placing further strain on an already fragile food system, while disruption in the Strait of Hormuz has weakened fertiliser supply chains. Soft commodities have historically shown the greatest sensitivity to such episodes, and these risks are not yet fully priced. + In 2026 alone, precious metals sprinted first with gold and silver reaching record highs, energy repriced sharply on the Iran conflict, and metals tightened on AI and defence demand. Leadership will continue to rotate, and a broad allocation is the most resilient way to stay invested across the full opportunity set.	WisdomTree Enhanced Commodity UCITS ETF
Solana is powering the on-chain economy	+ Solana is positioned to benefit from structural growth in payments, stablecoins, tokenisation and decentralised finance, making it an investment in the expansion of the on-chain economy rather than a single use case. + Solana has established itself as a leading smart contract platform, processing around one-third of on-chain decentralised exchange (DEX) trading volume while combining high throughput, ultra-low transaction costs and rapid settlement. + Adoption by firms such as Visa and Stripe, alongside network upgrades that improve scalability and resilience, strengthens Solana's potential as infrastructure for institutional-scale blockchain applications.	WisdomTree Physical Solana ETP
High dividend equities: A stabiliser in volatile markets	+ High dividend equities offer compelling income, downside protection and inflation resilience, qualities that matter acutely in today's environment of elevated volatility and persistent inflation. + The dividend yield acts as a natural stabiliser: as prices fall, yields rise, attracting incremental buyers and compressing drawdowns relative to growth-oriented benchmarks. + Dividend streams are typically less volatile than earnings or price momentum, providing portfolio anchoring during periods of macro turbulence. + WisdomTree has been a global pioneer in dividend-weighted equity strategies for over two decades, with a live track record in dividend investing that spans multiple market cycles across the US, Europe, emerging markets and the globe.
