

The WisdomTree Emerging Currency Fund seeks to achieve total returns reflective of both money market rates in selected emerging market countries available to foreign investors and changes to the value of these currencies relative to the U.S. dollar. Although the Fund invests in very short-term, investment grade instruments, the Fund is not a money market fund and it is not the objective of the Fund to maintain a constant share price.

For the quarter, the Emerging Currency Fund lost 0.89% on net asset value. Returns from higher interest rates in emerging markets partially offset the 2% decline in foreign currencies against the U.S. dollar. India and Poland contributed the most to total returns, while Indonesia, Turkey, and Thailand detracted the most from Fund performance, accounting for over half the Fund's losses related to currency moves.

The Fund underperformed its reference benchmark, the JP Morgan Emerging Local Markets Index Plus (ELMI+), by 0.73%. This was primarily due to a larger concentration by the benchmark in less volatile Asian currencies that depreciated less against the U.S. dollar.

WisdomTree shares are bought and sold at market price (not NAV) and are not individually redeemed from the Fund. Total Returns are calculated using the daily 4:00 p.m. EST net asset value (NAV). Market price returns reflect the midpoint of the bid/ask spread as of the close of trading on the exchange where Fund shares are listed. Market price returns do not represent the returns you would receive if you traded shares at other times.

*Slippage in calculation comes from timing, treatment of accruals as well as compounding mathematical issues which cannot be perfectly calculated.

There are risks associated with investing, including possible loss of principal. Foreign investing involves special risks, such as risk of loss from currency fluctuation or political or economic uncertainty. The Fund focuses its investments in specific regions or countries, thereby increasing the impact of events and developments associated with the region or country which can adversely affect performance. Investments in emerging or frontier markets are generally less liquid and less efficient than investments in developed markets and are subject to additional risks, such as risks of adverse governmental regulation and intervention or political developments.

Investments in currency involve additional special risks, such as credit risk and interest rate fluctuations. Derivative investments can be volatile and these investments may be less liquid than other securities, and more sensitive to the effect of varied economic conditions. As this Fund can have a high concentration in some issuers the Fund can be adversely impacted by changes affecting such issuers. Unlike typical exchange-traded Funds, there are no indexes that the Fund attempts to track or replicate. Thus, the ability of the Fund to achieve its objectives will depend on the effectiveness of the portfolio. Due to the investment strategy of certain Fund's they may make higher capital gain distributions than other ETFs. Please read the Fund's prospectus for specific details regarding the Fund's risk profile.

The JP Morgan Emerging Local Markets Index Plus and its underlying country and regional sub-indexes track the total returns for local-currency denominated money market instruments in emerging market countries. The returns are reported in U.S. dollar terms. The Equal-Weighted Emerging Currency Composite is an equal-weighted composite calculated by WisdomTree that tracks the returns of the currencies within the fund using the total returns of the respective country sub-indices of the JP Morgan Emerging Local Markets Index Plus. Carry refers to the return implied in the forward currency contracts. Spot return is the return based on currency appreciation.
